A DESPERATE CONFLICT.

Jeff J. Garrett, of New Providence, Tenn., kills a burglar and is himself seriously shot.

On last Monday night, about 10 o'clock, an attempt was made to burglarize the house of J. J. Garrett, a prominent and wealthy citizen of New Providence, Tenn., who is a brother of Mrs. Rust of this city. Two burglars broke in a window with a fence rail and the crash awoke Mr. Garrett. He stepped into a hall adjoining to get his gun and as he returned he saw a man getting in at the window. He fired both barrels at him and he fell out of the window dead. In the interval of Mr. Garrett's absence from the room, another burglar had entered the room and was squatting down by the bed, and as the former shot the man in the window the second burglar fired upon him with a 22-calibre pistol, shooting him through the lung. The wounded man then clinched with the robber and a desperate struggle ensued, in which the gun was broken off the stock. Mr. Garrett finally choked the burglar until he was insensible and faint and bleeding, threw him from the window. His wife then went to the house of a neighbor, half-a-mile away, for assistance, after looking her wounded husband in the house. When she returned with help, one burglar was found dead under the window, but the other had come to his senses and was gone. Officers scoured the country in search of him, but without success. Several tramps were arrested on suspicion and put in jail, but there was no evidence that the right man was caught.

The dead burglar was about 5 feet 8 inches in height, well built, weighed about 150 pounds, dark forehead, black hair, dark mustache and between 30 and 40 years of age. He had a long scar just at the root of the hair running from the middle of the forehead to the left, a small scar under the chin and an old pistol wound below the left knee. He was recognized as a man who had registered at the Franklin House as "Samuel Patterson, Louisville, Ky." This was probably not his name as the burglar on the inside called lustily for "Frank" during the struggle. On the dead man's body was found $3.50, a kit of burglar's tools and a late Cincinnati Enquirer. From the description given of him he is the same man who was circulating here last Saturday. He was a genteel looking tramp, who claimed to be a painter and it is said he lived here under an assumed name, as a painter, for a short while, some years ago. He fell in with a couple of umbrella menders here Saturday and the whole party left together Sunday. The remains were buried by Montgomery county Wednesday.

Mr. Garrett's wound is a painful one, but will not prove fatal. He is getting along pretty well and is considered out of danger, at this writing.

HERE AND THERE.

W. F. Patton, Life Insurance.

A. D. Rodgers, Fire Insurance.

Nashville street is being cleared of the sewer rubbish very slowly.

The Cornet Band will have a benefit at the Rink Wednesday night.

Sergt. Bates will deliver a free lecture to-morrow night, in this city.

The Episcopal ladies made $75 out of their concert last Friday evening.

The "Strictly Business" entertainment on the 29th will be one of the very best of the season.

Attention is called to the advertisement of a farm for sale by Mr. P. E. Bacon, in this issue.

The pavement between Main street and the post office, on Bridge street, is almost impassable in wet weather. Whose fault is it that it is so out of repair?

A half-column obituary has been sent us for publication. We cannot publish obituaries of more than ten lines free. Our rates are five cents per line for all over ten lines.

A very correct likeness of Mr. Jno. C. Day can now be seen at Gish & Garner's drug store. The portrait was drawn by his wife, who had been taking drawing lessons for only one week. Her work certainly speaks highly of her aptness and talent as an artist and of the skill of the teacher, Miss Tyler.

It would be a good idea for people to sleep with their firearms within reach. Our exchanges all over the State are filled with accounts of bold burglaries and Hopkinsville is liable to have experience in the same line. Keep your pistols handy and "if any man dares to haul you your window, shoot him on the spot."

Russellville street, east of the railroad, is being dug down several feet and the pike made lower. We understand that a portion of the expense will be borne by the citizens on the south side of the street and that the Board of Commissioners have appropriated $1,000 of the city's money. Our usually careful Board of Commissioners is being sharply criticized by some of the tax-payers, for their action in the matter.

The Honor Roll of the pupils attending Perry's Academy, Fairview, Ky., for the month ending Nov. 16th 1883. Maximum, 100, minimum, 95. Edgar Elgin, 98; Thos. A. Hord, 98; Robert Johnson, 97 1-2; Tommie Baber, 97; Mollie Elgin, 96 1-2; Ross Elgin, 96 3-4; Willie Vaughn, 96 3-4; Ethel Duke, 95 1-2; Lewis Elgin, 95 1-2; Richie Perry, 95 1-2; George Sims, 95.

W. WALTER BELL, Teacher.

We publish another chapter on the Grange matter to-day. Our correspondent asks us, in rather dogmatic terms, why we estimated the number of hogheads that would go to Louisville at 400, and why we did not mention an obligation of the Board of Trade. In reply to the first we will state that we named the above figures because the crop is a short one and because we believe that some of the Grange tobacco will, from both personal and other considerations, be sold in Hopkinsville. This estimate was concurred in by one of the most prominent Grangers in the county, before it appeared in the paper, and we still think it was not an unfair one. Further, the Board of Trade did not enter into an obligation, but merely repealed a by-law passed expressly to apply to the Grange tobacco, at the request of the warehousemen. We can scarcely understand the warning of "Be wary!" in "A Patron's" article. Our course has been and will be open, fair and neutral in the matter and we are conscious of having done nothing to incur the censure of either side. As a disseminator of the news, the South Kentuckian could not, in justice to its readers, let so important a matter pass unnoticed.

We believe a free discussion is desired by both sides, and our columns are open to both Grangers and warehousemen.

Sergeant Bates.

Sergt. G. H. Bates, who is traveling over the country lecturing "for the promotion of patriotic citizenship and national good-will," informs us by letter that he will deliver free addresses at the following times and places:

Petersburg, Friday evening, November 23.

Hopkinsville, Saturday evening, November 24.

Pembroke, Sunday evening, November 25.

Trenton, Monday evening, November 26.

He has delivered over 1800 free lectures in the northern states within the last seven years. His son, Master Bates, aged 14 years, who is carrying the flag from Chicago to Savannah, will also address the public at each meeting.

Miss Lizzie Booker, of Louisville, predicted that she would die in twenty-four hours and after visiting a number of friends and making preparations for her burial, she went to bed and died as she foretold, at 10 o'clock last Sunday.

A $1,000 monument for Judge Jno. M. Elliott, who was slain by Tom Buford, is to be erected in the Frankfort cemetery. It will be of Italian marble, 22 feet high, and on one side will be a medallion of the murdered Judge, which is pronounced a perfect likeness. The money was appropriated by the last Legislature.

A man in a sleeping-car on an Eastern railroad kept people awake two hours by propounding, about bed-time, the query: "What is the best thing to brush a hat with?" And the whole crowd stayed awake and guessed, and one man who came to his station, and had to get off without hearing the answer, felt awfully. And, finally, after they had all given it up, the questioner thought the best thing to brush a hat with was a hat brush. And it was painful to witness the disgust of the crowd.

The best coal mine in Iowa was discovered by a man who was fishing on Sunday, but it was on another man's land and all the discoverer got was a ducking.
